Hemispheres: The Tufts Journal of International Affairs

Hemispheres, The Tufts Undergraduate Journal of International Affairs, one of the oldest undergraduate journals in the field, is now accepting submissions relating to this year’s theme of Coping with Crises. Submissions should be research articles, approx. 5000-8000 words, written by undergraduates in a broad range of fields relevant to international affairs. To view paper requirements and guidelines, please visit this link. To submit a paper, or if you have any questions or concerns, please contact tuftshemispheres@gmail.com.

Submission Deadline: February 1, 2021.

We welcome and encourage a broad interpretation of the theme. Potential research topics may include, but are not limited to:

Coronavirus response, equality, disinformation, recession, Black Lives Matter, regional/emerging conflicts, cybersecurity, climate change, police brutality, gender issues, revisionist powers, social movements, elections, contested elections, bureaucratic response/mismanagement, technological development, refugees, mass/large sale migration, globalization, freedom of speech, authoritarianism, corruption, ethnic cleansing, nuclear proliferation, and more.

Sincerely,

Haruka Noishiki
Editor-in-Chief
Tufts Hemispheres
tuftshemispheres@gmail.com