Rhae Lynn Barnes makes waves in digital history

PhD candidate Rhae Lynn Barnes recently discussed her website project US History Scene with the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences. Since its founding almost a year ago, the project has received endorsements from the Smithsonian, the American Historical Association, and the National Council for History Education. A staff of fifteen writes for the site, producing posts related to topics in American history complete with recorded lectures, video clips, scanned manuscripts, and other archival material. For the entire story, please visit the Graduate School's website.

United Nations History Project Launched

On behalf of the Harvard Asia Center and the Joint Center for History and Economics at Harvard and Cambridge, it is our great pleasure to announce the launch of the United Nations History Project website. The website, made possible by the support of the United Nations Foundation, offers a wealth of materials for researching and teaching the history of the United Nations and international organizations. The project provides a starting point for scholarly research through comprehensive guides to physical and online sources for international organizations. In addition, leading scholars on the UN have written about their experiences working in UN archives and discuss further research possibilities. The website also offers a wide range of teaching materials for UN history, including annotated bibliographies, timelines, lectures by experts on UN history, and resources from a course taught on the global history of the UN at Harvard in spring 2011. For further information or to get involved, please like our Facebook page or send an e-mail to unitednationshistory@gmail.com.
