Greetings! The Chicago Journal of History, the undergraduate research publication at the University of Chicago, is accepting submissions for its Spring 2017 Edition until Friday, February 15th 2017. We would greatly appreciate your help if you could forward the announcement to the students in your programs.

We are also happy to let you know that the most recent issue (Autumn 2016) is published in print and on our website. In addition to student contributions, it features a panel discussion on "Bio-History in the Anthropocene" and interviews with David Abulafia and Quentin Skinner.

The Spring 2017 issue will likewise feature research articles, interviews, and panel transcripts. As usual, successful submissions represent a wide array of disciplines in the domain of humanities and social science inquiry. Authors and contributors to the journal represent research institutions in the U.S. and worldwide. And it would be our great honor to publish papers written by students at your institution.