The Columbia East Asia Review (CEAR), a multidisciplinary undergraduate journal of East and Southeast Asian Studies based at Columbia University, is currently seeking submissions for our Spring 2017 issue.

To give you a brief background, we select, edit, and publish undergraduate-only theses and research papers in relation to East Asian studies worldwide, regardless of discipline and field of research. We believe that CEAR would be of interest to the History Department at Harvard University and its undergraduates as CEAR seeks to publish top quality undergraduate research that extends to a readership across the globe. We would greatly appreciate if you could help disseminate the this information to your students. We welcome submissions from undergraduates or recent grads in any major and from all class years. You may view CEAR's past issues at http://eastasiareview.org. The deadline for Spring 2017 submissions is Wednesday, April 12, 2017

Please email editor@eastasiareview.org
should you have any questions.
Thank you for your time and look forward to submissions from Harvard.

Sincerely,
Xiangting Feng
