Early South Asians at Harvard:

Dharmanand, Manik, and Damodar Kosambi, 1910-1932

South Asia's Freedom in Global Perspective Seminar

Speaker:
Professor Ramakrishna Ramaswamy, IIT, Delhi;
Associate, Harvard University Asia Center

Chair:
Professor Sugata Bose, Harvard University

Co-sponsored by the Weatherhead Center, the Harvard University Asia Center, the Department of History, and the Department of South Asian Studies

Dharmanand Kosambi was an eminent Pali scholar who was at Harvard from 1910-1912 and 1918-1922. His children, Manik and Damodar, were students at Radcliffe and Harvard in the 1920s.

Manik was the first Indian woman to graduate from Radcliffe. Damodar studied mathematics at Harvard, graduated summa cum laude, and went on to become one of India's most renowned historians.

Thursday September 26, 5:00 p.m. ET

| Charles Warren B21 Seminar Room, Robinson Hall |
| 35 Quincy Street, Cambridge, MA |