

INTERCULTURAL COMMUNICATION WORKSHOP SERIES

Want to be more confident and effective when working with students and colleagues?

Come and discuss topics in intercultural communication with Bok professionals and experienced Harvard undergraduates!

Verbal Communication Styles

Thursday, March 3rd

3:00-4:30pm

Do you have a hard time keeping track of and participating in academic discussions? Are you unsure about how to start or join conversations with your students or colleagues? Does silence (or lack thereof) in interactions make you feel uneasy? If you have experienced any of these challenges, this workshop may help. Participants will make sense of verbal communication styles and practice verbal communication skills in order to be more effective in their roles at Harvard.

Body Language: Sending the Right Message

Thursday, March 31st

3:00-4:30pm

What messages are you sending through your non-verbal communication? In this workshop, discuss how body language is expressed and interpreted differently in various cultural contexts. With a special emphasis on the academic environment here at Harvard, participants will have the opportunity to practice nonverbal communication that will enable them to more effectively connect with others, engage students, and exude openness and confidence.

For more information and to register:

<http://bokcenter.harvard.edu/international-tfs>

Workshops held in room 307 in Bok's second office space at 125 Mt Auburn Street