

Call for Submissions - Penn Undergraduate Law Journal [www.pulj.org]

The Penn Undergraduate Law Journal (PULJ) is soliciting submissions for its twenty-first issue. Please see below for details.

QUALIFICATIONS FOR SUBMISSION

SUBMISSION DEADLINE: September 3rd, 2023 at 11:59pm EST

PULJ is seeking articles ranging from 20 to 100+ double-spaced pages in length. Our journal is especially receptive to research articles, senior theses, independent studies, and final essays written for courses. Articles need not be written on United States law—they can be written on the laws or legal system of any nation. We consider submissions on a rolling basis, so if your piece is not finished by the noted deadline, please still submit it for consideration in our subsequent issue.

Students in any field of study are encouraged to submit their work, so long as their pieces relate to law or legal systems. Possible disciplinary perspectives include, but are not limited to, history, criminology, economics, sociology, anthropology, English, biology, neuroscience, philosophy, linguistics, psychology, and political science.

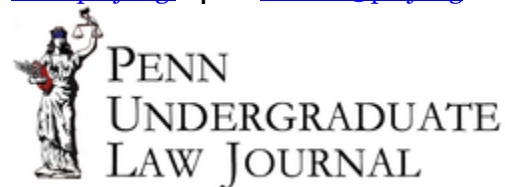

Please submit your work here: <http://www.pulj.org/submissions.html>

Selected pieces will be published in our twenty-first issue of the Penn Undergraduate Law Journal. If you have any questions or concerns, please feel free to notify us of them through the contact page of our website, which can be accessed here: <http://www.pulj.org/contact.html>

Thank you for considering our journal, and we hope to have the opportunity to consider your work!

All the best,
